

SUMMER LIFESAVING BEACH PATROLS COMMENCE

- Caloundra CityNews, September 24, 2004

THE 'Clubbies' are back on Caloundra beaches, with Dicky Beach, Bulcock Beach and Metropolitan Caloundra lifesavers at Kings Beach commencing their summer patrols last weekend.

Metropolitan Caloundra commenced the season with a week-long live in Bronze Medallion and Surf Rescue Certificate training course which saw young graduates take their place among over 80 active surf lifesavers on the Kings Beach patrol roster.

Eleven volunteer patrol teams will safeguard beachgoers every weekend and public holiday from now until April, 2005, performing thousands of hours of patrols at Kings Beach at no cost to the community.

To celebrate 50 years of lifesaving, the Ithaca, Caloundra City Life Saving Club will become a surf club this year.

The new Caloundra City (Ithaca) Surf Life Saving Club is seeking new members from Juniors to Seniors and everyone in between.

Ithaca clubbies patrol the very popular, but very dangerous Bulcock Beach where rips can sweep unsuspecting swimmers into the Pumicestone Passage and ultimately over the Caloundra Bar at Happy Valley.

Club President Helen Morris said she was hoping that the Caloundra community would support the new club, especially by helping to patrol the family beach during the busy summer season.

Along with members of the Dicky Beach Surf Life Saving Clubs, Kings and Bulcock Beach club members will be doorknocking this month to raise much needed funds to improve services offered by Surf Life Saving Queensland.

Sunshine Coast Development Officer, Byron Mills said funds raised during the annual doorknock appeal would go directly towards lifesaver training, community education and the purchase of additional equipment.

If your home is missed during the doorknock appeal, donations can be made by telephoning the Rescue Appeal Hotline on 1800 642 925 or at any branch of the Westpac Bank.
