

A snapshot of who's doing Cheques for charities

There was no disguising the good will at the recent Venetian masked ball hosted by the Henzells Caloundra RSL Foundation. The second annual event raised $10,000 to be split between the Metropolitan Caloundra junior surf lifesavers and Ithaca Royal Life Saving Club at Bulcock Beach. Caloundra RSL business development manager Lloyd Mills says he was delighted with the turnout to the gala event. "Both volunteer surf lifesaving groups are very close to the foundation's heart and it was very pleasing to see the community digging deep to help them continue their vital services for the community," he says. The Caloundra Ball followed on from the successful inaugural event in 2010, which assisted the Compass Institute – dedicated to assisting people with an intellectual and/or physical disability.
